With the Heta Consensus Algorithm, 33 master nodes are reliable on our network, with lightning transactions confirmed in 5 milliseconds. Every 1-second a new block is produced and on a parallel task a producer is authorized to produce a block. In addition, regarding scalability, block time and throughput, DPoS and BFT may seem to be the best algorithms, but there are limits. We propose a new blockchain technology based on DPoS and BFT hybrid consensus algorithm which is known as "Heta Consensus Algorithm".

MainChain is the public chain of Heta Blockchain system and is validated by 33 Master nodes using BFT-DPOS Consensus. Every activity of the system will be committed to Mainchain. To communicate between private chains and the main chain of the Heta system, we develop Heta Protocol, which can help private chains submit their data to the main chain for validating. Each private chain needs to pay the usage fee (via Heta Coin) when using the service. The private chain will pay the amount in HETA Coins in order to issue transactions. This fee is configurable and depends on the usage. This is called "Heta Protocol".
